

UNDULY EXCITED.

The Virginia Enterprise, as the mouth piece of the Republican party in this State, is unduly excited over the idea that it is quite possible that the past Republican administration of the Mint may have been responsible for the $60,000 shortage in that institution. It bases its right to froth at the mouth over an article sent by the telegraphic representative of the San Francisco Examiner and states that great indignation prevails in Carson over the insinuation in the article that the shortage may have occurred prior to the Adams administration. It further says:

There is no excuse for the tone of the Examiner's report of the Mint affair. That paper may possibly be subsidized by the supporters of the administration, or the correspondent who was sent from San Francisco may have got into the toils of Sam Davis. Neither of these possibilities, however, are fraught with that which appertains to journalistic glory.

The editor of the APPEAL had no more to do with the Examiner article than did the editor of the Enterprise, and neither endorses nor condemns it. We will state, however, for the benefit of the Enterprise writer that we have noticed no great display of indignation over the article in this city and will further state that large numbers of intelligent people in Carson are placing a great deal of stock in the theory. When the shortage first became known, the writer received a dispatch from M. H. DeYoung of San Francisco asking for telegraphic information regarding the shortage. We have sent dispatches daily to the Chronicle of San Francisco regarding the shortage and these dispatches are a matter of record. In these dispatches we have endeavored to sift facts from rumors, no easy task under the circumstances. We have never instigated in the most remote way any dispatch to the Examiner.

The trouble with the Enterprise is that it is edited by someone who has but a remote knowledge of Nevada. He is evidently a credulous, susceptible individual, easily stuffed by strangers and gullible to a remote degree. Some playful typo in the Enterprise office has "strung the jay" with the idea that when anything happens to the Republican party in this State, that the editor of the APPEAL is at the bottom of it. These stories have so excited the imagination of the Enterprise tenderfoot that he has built up out of the APPEAL editor a veritable "Frankenstein" rising from the charnel vaults, the manufactured product of a hundred corpses, endowed with diabolical life, ready to go forth and terrorize the earth.

The story goes that once in an Irish village, there was a mischievous youth known as "Paddy O'Miles boy," who stole all the apples, robbed all the hen roosts, poisoned all the dogs and broke all the windows in the town. "Paddy O'Miles" boy has long since been gathered to his fathers, but to the editor of the Enterprise, his reincarnated spirit still lives in the person of the APPEAL editor. We presume he will never be wholly disabused of the idea, for we know of no way that an incandescent ass can ever be taught anything else.

We will further state for his benefit, that the theory of the shortage being a hold-over product of another administration is firmly believed in this city by large numbers of people and they cite in support of their theory that about two years ago the Washington Inspector who was sent here to examine the Mint, had no opportunity of doing so as he was kept busy in social entertainments most of the time. That while he was being paid by Uncle Sam to look after the bullion, he was inspecting the beauties of Lake Tahoe, and while he was supposed to be pouring over accounts in the various departments, he was wending his way along the cocktail route which starts at Geo. Bryson's saloon on the North line of the V. & T. R. R. and ends at John Meyer's saloon on the South. It was this sort of thing that made a lot of talk at the time and this talk has been revived since the shortage came to light. This street talk while on everybody's tongue has never before found its way into the columns of the APPEAL until to-day, nor would it have been here now, except to repel the attack by an irresponsible newspaper, who before the official investigation is half over hastens to fix the blame upon the present administration before the evidence is in.

The APPEAL believes that all hands had better wait until the Inspector and the detectives are through with their work, and then let the ax fall where it may. It is a matter of perfect indifference to us whether the guilt is fastened on the past or the present administration, but we think we voice the sentiments of all honest people, when we say that we hope the real culprits will spend a term of years at hard labor in the penitentiary.

HARD FACTS.

The sixty-five banks of New York City, which are members of the New York clearance house, are also known as the associated banks. They are in close communion with the clearing houses of Boston and Philadelphia, and dictate the policy of the U. S. Treasury department. During the panic of 1893 there were sixty-four bank failures in the United States. Of this number only fifty-one were credited to the New England and Middle States. The law regarding reserves was promptly enforced against the Western and Southern banks, which accounts for their numerous failures, but with Wall Street the case was very different. Cleveland and the U. S. Treasury officials allowed the New York banks to keep open house for several months in direct violation of the law. It was advertised to the whole world for several months that the New York banks were notoriously short in their reserves, but owing to the great hypnotic influence which Wall Street exerts over Cleveland and the Treasury officials, the associated banks were allowed to violate the law with impunity.

Wall Street seems to have full control of the Treasury department. But after all, Wall Street is simply the agent of the British bondholders who are using it as a medium to force the Government to issue more bonds. They declare that if Cleveland refuses to borrow, that they will withdraw our gold from circulation and precipitate a panic in Wall Street. This threat, it is supposed, will have the desired effect, and Cleveland will probably put another mortgage on the country within six months.
